

Guidelines for Verification of Credit Hours in Distance Education Courses

A county college that is offering a distance education course that was initially approved using the credit hour definition determines the amount of student work expected in the distance education course in order to achieve the course student learning outcomes. All sections of a course use the same course outline/syllabus and assess the same course student learning outcomes.

If a county college is offering a distance learning education course that was not approved following the New Jersey Administrative Code credit hour definition, then the county college is responsible for a process that provides evidence of credit-hour equivalency.
